THE Arkansas County Judges association, meeting at Little Rock Wednesday, complains that the state is getting all the new tax money, while the counties are left to struggle along with burdens which the state should carry. There is justice in this complaint.

State Is Attacked by County Judges for Revenue Loss

Complain Most of County Agent Expense Is Borne Locally

WARRANT JUGGLING

Preference Being Given, Instead of Paying in Order of Issue

LITTLE ROCK—Twenty-six county judges met here Wednesday to "survey the wreckage" of the recent legislative session, and offered mute protest when Judge R. M. Ruthven, president of the Arkansas Association of County Judges, declared "the state will get several millions in new money but the counties will not get a dollar to pay new expenses. They are worse off than ever."

The judges agreed that as a result of the recent legislative session the counties received many extra-expenditures but no new revenue. Led by Judge George Spencer of Drew county, they demanded to know when funds for relief of unemployed will become available but the question went unanswered when Roy Brewitt, secretary of the State Public Welfare Commission, failed to appear for a scheduled address.

The judges demanded to know from T. Roy Reid, assistant director in Judge George Spencer of Drew county Extension Service, why the state was required to assume only $500 of the annual salaries of county farm agents, when the counties were required to put up a minimum of $1,000.

To threats that it would be necessary to discontinue county farm agents, Director Reid replied that loss of a county agent would mean the loss of thousands of dollars to the county in benefits paid by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

He said regulations required that extension agents be removed whenever a county becomes more than three months in arrears in paying the county's portion of the agent's salary. Several judges said they would be unable to pay their county agents but the meeting as a whole took no action on a proposal that the judges stand together in the matter of retaining agents.

Sims Protests Assistance
J. Bryan Sims, chief deputy auditor in the office of Comptroller Griffin Smith, fared better than Director Reid. The judges' questions evinced a respect for the comptroller's office as they sought the advice of Mr. Sims as to means of stopping what they said was a current practice among county treasurers and collectors of juggling warrants.

Mr. Sims replied that his office was planning to duplicate immediately in all counties, a duplicate system of numbers.

Hempstead Radish Crop Moving to Eastern Market

Fifth Carload Shipped From Blevins—Third Is Leaving Hope

BUT PRICES SLUMP

Cold Wave in North Hurts Retail Buying of Vegetables

Hempstead county's radish harvest, first of the spring revenue producers, was in full swing Thursday with shipments being made from Blevins, Hope and Emmet.

Shipments of radishes from Blevins started Monday. The fifth carload from that point was to leave Thursday night.

Approximately 25 to 30 cars will be shipped from that area this season, as compared to 35 last year.

Prices Wednesday ranged from 40 to 50 cents, depending upon quality. Monte Seed store in Hope has loaded out two cars this week and was preparing a third car for shipment Thursday.

Top quotations at the start of the harvest, about 10 days ago, was 75 cents per bushel.

The market Thursday had slumped to 30 cents per bushel. The decline in price was caused by the recent cold snap and a large movement of the crop.

The weather here, it was explained, has not affected the quality, but the cold wave in the Northern and Eastern states turned the public from vegetables to a meat diet.

Harvesting of radishes over the county will continue through next week.

Sawmill Unit of Williams Lumber Firm Is Destroyed

Flames Eat Up One Division of Local Plant in Quick Order

BLAZE IS STOPPED

Most of Mill Saved—Lost Unit Will Be Replaced in 4 Weeks

The sawmill unit of the J. L. Williams & Sons Lumber Co. here was razed by fire late Wednesday, causing damage estimated at between $10,000 and $12,000.

The blaze, one of the most spectacular seen here in some time, originated in the sawmill unit. Whipped by a stiff northwest wind, the fire spread rapidly.

For a time it was feared the blaze would envelop other units of the lumber company. Heroic work of the Hope Fire department prevented its spread to other sections of the plant. Some 20,000 feet of lumber was destroyed.

The fire spread so quickly that practically the entire sawmill unit was ablaze when firemen reached the scene. The strong west wind threw the blaze directly on other units of the plant, causing much apprehension.

Officials of the company announced Thursday that plans would go forward immediately to rebuild the plant. They estimated that it would require four to six weeks to restore the mill.

Approximately 150 men will be affected during the shutdown. The plant has been in operation here since 1931. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Which Is Princess? Both, Because Princess Is Twins

A princess who is twins will grace the throne of Memphis' great annual cotton carnival and that's fact, not a joke. The throngs attending the fête, May 6-11, will see both Jean Boyer, left, and June Boyer, right, wearing the crown, but they'll never know which is which, as the twins' own friends can't tell them apart. One of them was chosen for the honor, but she refused unless her sister could share it. The solution was easy, as a look at the pictures will prove.

Kills Brother's Wife and Himself

Crawford County Boy Angered by Interference in Love Affair

CONWAY, Ark.—(AP)—Word of a double tragedy in the Republican community, north of here, was brought to Conway Thursday by Sheriff J. L. Summers, who said Burl Reynolds, 20, shot and killed his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ley Reynolds, 27, and then turned his shotgun on himself to inflict a mortal wound.

The only witness to the shooting, the sheriff said, was Lee Reynolds, 8-year-old son of Mrs. Reynolds. Sheriff Summers said his investigation revealed Burl Reynolds' love affair with a girl of the community was disapproved by his sister-in-law.

The shooting occurred Wednesday night, but word did not reach the sheriff until Thursday.

Sales Tax Bill Is Signed by Governor

2 Per Cent Hall Law Goes Into Effect in Arkansas May 1

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Governor Futrell Thursday afternoon signed the Hall 2 per cent sales tax act, which goes into effect May 1.

Of the $2,500,000 estimated revenue from the sales tax, 65 per cent will go to the schools and the remainder to the general revenue fund, out of which money will be taken for relief purposes.

Compromise Fails
WASHINGTON—(AP)—With the $1,800,000,000 relief bill locked Wednesday night in a congressional conference committee, government officials rounded plans for the set-up to handle the huge work program.

Efforts of the house and senate committees to reach an accord on the 50 changes made by the senate failed during a three-hour afternoon conference.

All controversial amendments, including the Thomas relief inflation provision, were thrust aside until another meeting Thursday. Some minor changes in technical language were made.

Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, chairman of the senate group, announced that the conferees had agreed to preserve strict silence until a final compromise was reached.

Reports that Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins would have a guiding hand in handling the big fund, brought word from a high administration official that Mr. Roosevelt himself would direct its spending.

The responsibility is being assumed by Mr. Roosevelt because of the criticism in congress directed at Hopkins, Secretary Ickes, the PWA administrator, and Rexford G. Tugwell, under-secretary of Agriculture, who are slated to handle phases of the program.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was said, will head the Allocation Committee, which will pass on allocations of funds. But officials said privately that of necessity most of the details would be left to the president's assistants.

Third License for Liquor Is Granted

Raymond Robins Issued State and Municipal Permits Here

Retail liquor stores in Hope totaled three Thursday with the granting of a permit to Raymond Robins. He was issued a state license Wednesday morning. Licenses had been granted previously to J. C. Porterfield and Jett Williams.

Although an out-of-town newspaper reported that J. T. Hughes had been granted a permit in Hope, the State Revenue Department Thursday morning told The Star the item was misleading.

J. T. Hughes resides at Warren. He was issued a license to retail liquor at Warren—not Hope.

The revenue commissioner said 17 permits were issued Wednesday, bringing the total licensed retailers in Arkansas to 142.

Licensed wholesalers remained at 21, no wholesale permits having been issued since Monday.

FERA School Aid Restored to State

Dyess Announces Spring Allotments to 425 School Districts

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—State Relief Administrator W. R. Dyess announced Thursday he was authorized to continue aid to eligible school districts through the normal terms this spring. He said about 425 districts are affected by the order, which is the first definite announcement of the continuation of federal aid to Arkansas schools.

Prewitt Will Not Obstruct Relief

But Will Resign Only When FERA Openly Demands It of Him

LITTLE ROCK—If the retention of Roy Prewitt as executive secretary of the State Public Welfare Commission should mean the denial of $50,000 a month in federal aid to the unemployed, Prewitt said Wednesday he would not resign, he said Wednesday.

"Of course I would not stand between destitute people of the state and federal aid," he said. "But before resigning, I would have to have direct official confirmation from Washington that I am objectionable to the FERA and that federal aid will be withheld if I am retained."

"I do not intend to resign simply because someone in the FERA objects to me for political reasons," he said. "Malcolm Miller, regional director of the FERA, who now is in Little Rock, is expected to be in Little Rock Monday and will confer with the Executive Committee of the Public Welfare Commission."

The Washington office Tuesday referred Governor Futrell to Director Miller when he, at the request of the Executive Committee, telephoned to ask whether Mr. Prewitt is persona non grata to Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief director, as was reported to the governor by W. R. Dyess, state FERA director.

Bourse Suspends for Three Days, Prohibiting Foreign Exchange

BRUSSELS, Belgium—(AP)—The government, Thursday, ordered the Belgian bourse to remain closed for the next three days.

There will be no quotations or foreign exchange during the closed period.

The general view expressed in financial quarters is that a devaluation program will be announced Friday.

Desertion of the gold standard by Belgium was forecast several days ago by the resignation of the cabinet. Should Belgium go off gold, it is likely that the other countries of the gold bloc, including France, chief continental banker, would quickly follow, putting the last of the world's nations on a devaluated currency basis.

Appropriation Bill Signed by Futrell

But He Vetoes Three of the Items, Saving Total of $5,450

LITTLE ROCK—The impasse between the governor's office and the secretary of state's office over transmittal of approved bills to the legislature was ended Thursday when Governor Futrell signed the appropriation bill, saving $5,450.

The bill appropriated $81,244 for the biennial beginning July 1 for constitutional offices and departments, including the Supreme Court, Circuit and Chancery Courts, but the governor vetoed three items totaling $5,450.

He vetoed a travel allowance of $1,200 for the governor's office, an item of $3,000 for a stenographic reporter for the attorney general's office, and an item of $1,250 for the secretary of state's office to pay for printing the biennial report of that office.

The secretary of state's report, the last issue of which was printed in 1925, is a reference book, containing names of all state and county officials, as well as members of the legislature, since the state was admitted to the Union, and much historical information concerning the government of the state and counties. The supply of the 1923 edition has been exhausted.

Child's Ears Impaired by Cold or Disease

Children who do not hear well usually suffer from certain types of complaints, or were born with defective hearing.

A child with defective hearing has great difficulty in adapting itself to conditions of daily life. It is likely to develop a sense of inferiority and depression.

The common cold is probably one of the most prominent causes of defective hearing. You know the manner in which hearing is dulled by a severe cold. This is usually due to a temporary inflammation of the tube which carries from the nose to the ear. A real infection is set up in the ear, permanent damage may result. Before they are 12 years old, children acquire infections of the ear more easily than do grown-up persons. The reason is that the lymphoid structures of nose and throat are greater in amount and become infected more easily.

Certain types of infection, namely, those with the virus germ called "measles," are more likely to damage the ears than are others. When a child has repeated colds, with enlarged adenoids and with difficulty in breathing through the nose, infection of the ear is extremely likely. For the reason the specialist in diseases of nose and throat may recommend removal of adenoids as a means of protecting the child against frequent infections in the ear.

Removal of the tonsils and adenoids at the right time is an exceedingly important factor in securing a successful result. The operation should not be done in the presence of an active infection, and it should not be done when the child is greatly run down.

After the operation, the child should be kept in bed for at least two to four days and, if recovery is not rapid enough, even longer.

Many cases of defective hearing in children are associated with common infectious diseases like measles, mumps, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. Children who have had tonsils and adenoids removed usually suffer less from complications affecting the ear in the presence of these infectious diseases.

Of practical importance also in prevention of deafness is control of habits during swimming. The child with a cold should not be permitted to engage in swimming. Violent blowing of the nose after swimming may be serious.

Children should not be permitted to swim more than 15 or 20 minutes at a time. If they have a tendency to have trouble with the ears, they should never be allowed to practice diving.

The child who complains of defective hearing or fullness in the head after swimming should give up this sport, because that is nature's way of warning him in advance of trouble.

A BOOK A DAY

He Saved India—and Was Called a Thief

If your knowledge of English history is as hazy as that of your reviewer, you probably remember Warren Hastings only as an English administrator in India who was called to account by Parliament for his peculations, and whose defense is vaguely supposed to have been that, considering the pickings that were available, he was as good as a thief.

A picture as hazy as that is pretty likely to be wrong; and "Strange Destiny," a new biography of Hastings by A. Mervin Davies, gives it an entirely different aspect.

Mr. Davies presents Hastings as the first of the great administrators sent out to India by the British. He served in a troublous time, while he was in India, the American colonies were establishing their independence, and the British were losing the American possessions also. That she did not lose was due to Hastings.

Mr. Hastings robbed the natives at a time when mere clerks were making millions in a few years in India.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Observative Faculty Should Be Cultivated

Perhaps few of us can glance at a person and tell him what he had for breakfast—unless there is egg on his cravat. We cannot tell by his shoe strings, as did Sherlock Holmes, that our visitor has gotten out of the wrong side of bed, left by the back door and missed his bus.

But every mother's son of us misses about nine-tenths of what goes on because we are just too dumb to use our eyes.

Observation is lacking in most people to an unbelievable degree and yet it is almost without parallel as an asset to success.

Some schools have taken it up as part of mental training and I know of teaching more worth-while. Schools teach memory, or rather emphasize those studies that train it, and they keep on inventing mental gymnastics to develop reason. But for the major part they stop there. One would think that memory and reason were the only faculties these children were going to need in a highly competitive world.

Now it so happens that children are more observant than their parents. Ask almost any child what Claudette Colbert wore in such and such a part of a certain show. You will get a fairly accurate description, whereas you will have to puzzle your brains to remember what the plot of the show was about. Ask a boy what the number of the street car was that he came home on and there is an almost even chance he will have it. You or I would not, quite probably, be able to identify the motorman.

Yes, most children are naturally observant. They have better memories, too, as we know. Actually they have far greater potential possibilities than grown-ups. But while their memories do not atrophy early, their powers of observation do. Why? Because that which is not constantly exercised and kept on tip-toe neither advances nor stands still. It retreats.

This habit of mentally registering things can be taught at home as well as in school. It makes one of the best games in the world. Show the children a picture, any picture, for a period of thirty seconds. Then remove it and see who can remember the most details accurately. Tell a story describing a room or the way certain people were dressed. Then compare notes. Observation is not all optical pictures. It includes mental pictures drawn on the mind through the other senses as well as that of vision.

Take them unawares and see what they have noticed about the houses they pass every day, the kind of steps that lead to Mr. Smith's porch, the kind of path that leads around Mrs. Jones' house. What color of tie the principal wore or if the teacher wore her wrist watch.

The complaint in many schools and high schools has been for years-on-years that children won't pay attention. Attention means observation with eyes and ears, called concentration—alert senses to catch what is going on and being said. Strange that such a simple thing has been neglected for so long.

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MILlicent Graves, secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. In panic she rushes away and registers at a hotel under an assumed name.
JANIS HAPP, distinguished-looking stranger, recognizes Millicent and offers to help her. She sends her to a beauty parlor where she is transformed into a brunette. Happ takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. His son, NORMAN HAPP, was a militant against his stepbrother, ROBERT CAISE, and tells her a mysterious woman in black is killing her some power over his stepmother.

Millicent falls asleep. A noise awakens her and she finds a note under her door reading, "The woman in black ermine is here." Millicent dresses, sees the woman in black drive away in a sedan. Millicent, in the garage, hears a noise and the electric lights flash on.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII

MILlicent, holding herself flat against the door boards of the automobile, trying to make herself as nearly invisible as possible, held her breath and listened.

She heard someone moving about, heard the sound of a starting motor whirling into throbbing life. Then a car swept out in a streak of fast motion.

Lights were still on in the garage, but Millicent took a chance on discovery to find out who had taken out that car.

She jumped to the cement floor of the garage, ran to the door and looked down the driveway.

A cabriolet, very fancy and stylish, which had been in the garage and which she had intuitively placed as belonging to Norman Happ, was gliding smoothly down the driveway. As it turned into the street Millicent noticed that it was running without lights.

Millicent ran to the two remaining cars—a big sedan and a coupe. There were ignition keys in the coupe, and she jumped behind the wheel, turned the switch and pressed the starter. The motor throbbled to life.

So nervous with excitement that her hands were trembling, Millicent backed the car out of the garage, put it in gear and raced out of the driveway.

After she hit the street she ran for several blocks without lights, trying to keep the cabriolet ahead of her in view, but she was unable to do so and finally switched on the lights.

With the headlights she was able to pick up the speeding cabriolet. Occasionally the tail light reflected a red gleam, or her headlights glittered back in dazzling brilliance from the windshield. Once or twice she glimpsed the big sedan ahead, which the cabriolet was undoubtedly following.

The cars were traveling at high speed and Millicent was forced to use all of her skill as a driver to keep in the procession. She wondered if the driver of the cabriolet suspected that she was following him, wondered if that driver were, perhaps, Norman Happ.

SUDDENLY Millicent caught her breath with a gasp of apprehension.

The motor coughed, sputtered and coughed to life again, ran smoothly, then missed and stopped.

She depressed the throttle and got no results. She pulled out the choke and, for a moment, the car responded. Then once more it died. Her eyes rested apprehensively on the gasoline gauge. It showed that the tank was empty. The car was barely moving now, and Millicent kicked out the clutch and piloted the car into the curb. The big sedan and the speeding cabriolet had swept on out of sight.

Millicent was so mad she could have cried with sheer anger. The idea of leaving her car in a garage with an empty gasoline tank—of all the fool things for a person to do. . . . She supposed that it would be Robert CAISE, brilliant, irresponsible, flighty. She looked at the registration certificate and found her surmise had been right. The car was registered in the name of Robert CAISE.

Millicent found herself thinking that Norman Happ never would have done anything like that. Norman Happ had a sense of responsibility. His car would have been filled with gas, oil and water. The tires would have been in perfect condition—but the ignition key wouldn't have been in the lock.

The very break that gave her an opportunity to use the car in the first place was in one way directly connected with her inability to accomplish anything with it after she had borrowed it.

Millicent switched off the lights, hesitated a moment, then locked the car and slipped the key container into the pocket of her fur coat.

It was a leather key container and there were seven or eight keys on it.

"Well," she said to herself, "I presume I've got to get back, and I guess there's no way for me to go except to walk."

There were no cabs cruising along these streets and, even had she encountered one, she had no money with which to pay for it.

With dogged determination she started walking back down the deserted avenue, her little heels clicking spiritedly upon the echoing cement.

Rain fell intermittently—at times in hissing torrents, at times in a cold drizzle. Millicent's skirt, ankles and shoes were soaking wet. Her fur coat glistened with moisture.

At length, weary, tired and chilled, she saw the big house looming before her. It was now only about 75 yards away and so tired was she that she was counting the steps.

AUTOMOBILE headlights danced along the wet pavement, sending reflections shimmering against the sides of the building. Instinctively she stepped to one side, listening herself against a wrought-iron fence.

The machine, a cabriolet, passed her, this time running with lights. She could see the form of the driver, noticed that the collar of his overcoat was turned up around his neck and a soft felt hat pulled low on his forehead.

She heard the hiss of the tires on the wet pavement, then saw the red lights on the rear glare into brilliance as the driver applied brakes. The car swung wide for a turn and entered the driveway of Jarvis Happ's house.

Millicent forgot that she was tired. Whoever had followed the woman in the ermine coat had returned, and she wanted to talk with him. She speeded up her steps.

She was still in the driveway when she heard the sliding doors of the garage roll shut. After that there was no sound save that of her own feet on the wet driveway. She reached the garage and found the door was closed and locked. She looked up at the house. It was dark and somber, except for the dull brilliance of the hall windows in which the night lights were still burning.

It was then that Millicent realized the full extent of her predicament. She was locked out. It would be necessary to arouse someone in the household in order to enter the house.

She tried the garage door once more, then walked wearily around the house, wet feet squishing moisture at every step. She tried a side door. It, too, was locked. She tried the front door with no more success.

A wicker chair offered her aching feet some respite, and she dropped wearily into it, surveying the gloomy darkness of the porch, listening to the steady drip, drip of the rain as it dropped down from the eaves of the porch. She sat there for several minutes and then realized that she was taking cold. Somehow she must effect an entrance to the house.

SHE had circled around one side of the house. She wondered whether, perhaps, there might be a door on the other side. She was cold and cramped now, and fully appreciated the extent of her predicament. She walked around the house. There was one door and she tried it, but it, too, was locked. She came to the back of the house and suddenly caught her breath with a throbbing intake of quick hope.

There was a separate building at the back, the lower floor of which was used as a storage place for the gardener's tools. The upper floor was occupied, and she remembered hearing someone say it was where the chauffeur had his quarters.

Lights glowed from the windows of this upper room, and Millicent suddenly remembered Norman had told her Jarvis Happ had commissioned his chauffeur to shadow the woman in the black ermine coat when next she came to the house.

Harry Felding, then, must have been the one who drove that cabriolet. He had shadowed the woman in the black ermine coat, and doubtless knew where she lived. Perhaps Felding would give her the information. Perhaps he could let her into the house or find some place where she could spend the night—some place where she could divest herself of her wet garments.

She crossed the strip of yard, climbed the stairs which led to the upper room. Her knuckles knocked gently against the door. When there was no answer she knocked more loudly, and then, still receiving no response, she twisted the knob of the door.

The door was unlocked. She opened it and took a step through the doorway into the room.

The light streamed upon her features. For a moment her eyes were dazzled by the brilliance. Then they came to focus upon the room.

A startled scream was wrung from her pallid lips at the sight which met her eyes.

Air-Trail Blazer Sails on Pacific

Service Ship to Set Up Airports All the Way to Orient

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(AP)—The steamer North Haven, bearing men and equipment to rear miniature cities on lonely islands destined to become way stations for trans-Pacific planes, sailed Wednesday.

Everything from pre-fabricated buildings to buttons and safety pins made on the 6,000-ton cargo. These little cities will be the homes of 118 men on aviation's newest frontier.

As the North Haven headed out the Golden Gate, the Pan American Clipper, destined to become the first plane to make a commercial flight between California and Hawaii, was sailing westward over the Gulf of Mexico from Miami, Fla. The big passenger ship was heading for California to inaugurate Pan American Airways, experimental service to Hawaii, probably about April 10.

Midway Island, one of the Hawaiian group, 1,323 miles west of Honolulu, and Wake Island, 1,111 miles from Midway were the destinations of the North Haven.

Wake Island, about half way between Manila and Honolulu, recently came out under the jurisdiction of the United States Navy by order of President Roosevelt.

From Honolulu, under the proposed operating route, the big seaplanes will fly to Midway Island; thence to Wake Island; to Guam, 1,450 miles; to Manila, 1,500 miles; and to Canton, China, 700 miles—a total of about 5,300 miles. All stations between California and Manila will be on American soil.

1,500 Miles in 11 Hours

ACAPULCO, Mexico.—(AP)—The Pan American Clipper, giant airplane, used in exploring a trans-Pacific passenger route arrived here at 1:20 Wednesday night completing a 1,500-mile nonstop flight from Miami in 11 hours and five minutes.

The plane was to stop overnight here with its crew of six before continuing to San Diego, Calif. The pilot said the flight to this city, on the western coast of Mexico, had been successful in every way. It was planned to fly to San Francisco Friday and to continue across the Pacific from there.

Target of Gang Orders 'Mopup'

Target of gang bullets which missed their mark, Thomas J. Courtney, above, Cook county state's attorney, has declared a "wipeout" drive on Chicago thugs. The six-foot prosecutor, who has been a terror to racketeers, was riding with an aide when gangsters, speeding by, fired eight shots into his car, without effect.

HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP

BY DAN THOMAS

How Far Gals Start Still a Good Story

HOLLYWOOD—There's one story, it told in Hollywood, of which the world at large never seems to tire. "How he got his start"—the "he" in this case being practically any star, male or female, in the business.

No matter how frequently the tale is related, however, it invariably is related in a different color. All of which might account for the fact that it continues to fascinate those interested in the movies and their glittering personalities.

I don't mean that players are fictitious transplants from New York to Bombay just so different stories can be told about their entrances into movieland. The Hollywood prafac agents never would do a thing like that—not unless they thought they could get away with it.

In the main, however, the numerous and varied tales are gleaned from the different players who continue to stream in and out of the celluloid hamlet.

Two of today's favorite players, for example, made their debuts as corpses. "Outward Bound," one of the early talking films which created no end of comment, brought Leslie Howard to the screen in the role of a dead man who moved about along with a number of other "dead" characters who walked and talked.

No Chance to Talk

Poor Jean Muir didn't even have a chance to be a talking corpse, though. As a pathetic wail who had committed suicide, she spent her first day before the cameras lying prone on a table which was wheeled in and out of the frame of a morgue.

Fat O'Brien's first day as a film actor was spent running backward around and around a table while Adolphe Menjou chased him, and a camera, mounted on a circular track ingeniously devised by Lewis Milestone, followed them.

Warren William made his start by escaping Pearl White from a burning building in one of the old-time serials—and immediately quit the business until many years later when its requirements for actors was less strenuous.

But, probably just to prove that Hollywood still is quite a mad place, Pinky Tomlin, who promises to be a real sensation during the coming year, made his auspicious debut with a cow between him and the camera so that only his hands could be seen milking the gentle creature.

Hearty Assurance

Despite the fact that their romance has been on the rocks for several months, Lee Tracy and Isabel Jewell still are on speaking terms—oh, very much so. The other day Lee called Isabel on the phone. Upon hearing her former suitor's voice, the actress said, "Hello, angel." That's what she used to call him.

"Say that again," Lee exclaimed.

"Hello, angel," Isabel replied.

"That's all I wanted to hear," said Tracy, hanging up.

Motto: Speak Up!

Because her speech was decidedly English when she ordered a sandwich, pretty Evelyn Bostock now is George O'Brien's leading lady in "The Cowboy Millionaire." Producer Sol Lesser had been combing Hollywood for a girl to play the role and was not having much luck. Stopping in the studio cafe for a hasty bite of lunch, Lesser happened to notice the girl at an adjoining table. From the standpoint of looks she was exactly what he wanted. Then she ordered a sandwich. Her speech was perfect. She got the role.

Chemicals will play a big part in the next war, predicts former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker. Future soldiers, it seems, will fight their way through shot and shell.

A few more floods, and midwesterners will begin recalling those good old drouth days.

Government Tests New Air Flivver

Small Autogiro Travels on Highway, Climbs Vertically in Air

WASHINGTON—Hoping that it has discovered the air flivver of the future, the Department of Commerce Wednesday purchased for experimental purposes a new type autogiro which can fly in the air, run along a highway on its wheels like an automobile and be stored in a private garage.

The new plane will have no wings being kept in the air by its motor and it is thereby possible to run it along a highway of ordinary width or store it in a garage.

Its propeller can be disengaged by a clutch and the motor's power switched to the wheels on the undercarriage, making it travel along the ground like an auto. Its rotor, or horizontal propeller, can be disengaged and folded away.

Persons using such an autogiro could fly to small, cramped landing fields near their destination, descend, and by switching the power from propeller to wheels, roll along the roads or streets to their destination just as though they were in an automobile, the department said. An official description of the new experimental plane said:

"The autogiro being purchased will be designed for operation on the highways after it has made its landing or prior to its take off. This will be accomplished by providing rotor wings which can be readily folded back over the fuselage, a clutch between the engine and propeller, so that the propeller may be disconnected from the engine and a power drive from the engine to the wheels so that the rotor plane becomes practically an automobile for ground operation. It should therefore be quite possible to house this rotor plane at home and drive it to the nearest suitable field for take off, or land on a field near one's point of destination and then proceed there to over the highway.

"The engine will be placed back of the pilot and passenger to afford the greatest of comfort and the rotor will be of the direct control type, which obviates the need of any fixed wings. The passenger and pilot will sit side by side and the space available will be equal to that provided in the average coupe. The plane will be powered with an 85 horsepower engine."

Obviously

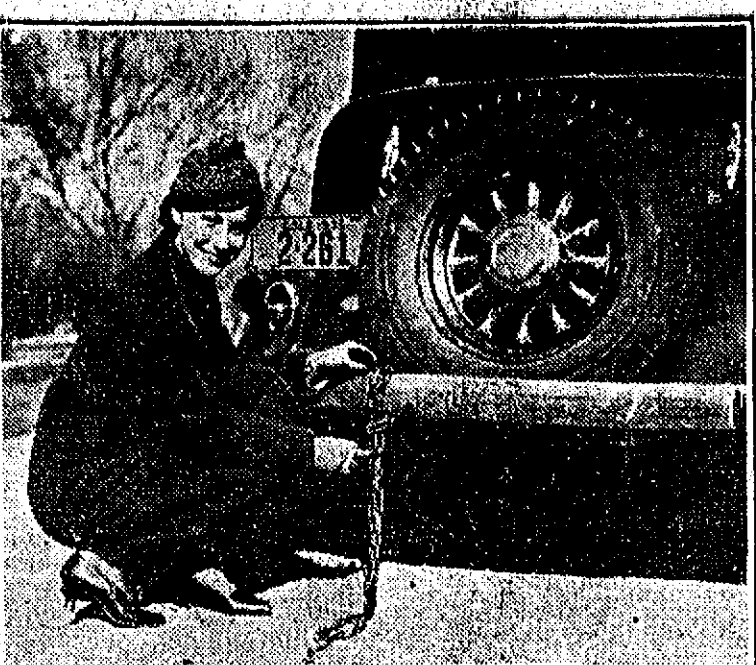

Discovering yet another mistake in his letters, the enraged employer summoned his new typist.

"You came here with good testimonials," Miss Brown," he barked, "and do you mean to tell me you don't know the King's English?"

"Of course I know it," she replied, indignantly. "Otherwise he wouldn't be King would he?"—Birmingham Express.

It has been estimated that a billion pencils are used in the United States every year.

She's on to Sandstorm 'Stall'

When midwestern sandstorms stalled hundreds of automobiles, Gayle Shultz, Pueblo, Colo., co-ed, figured it wasn't sand that was to blame, but static electricity, generated by the storms, which short-circuited ignition systems. So, as shown above, she fastened chains to her rear bumper, to drag on the ground and carry off the static.

B. Baruch Favors Ending War Profit

Wilson's War Industry Director Testifies Before Senate

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Expecting an argument, a surprised senate committee Wednesday heard Bernard Baruch, white-haired master of finance, graciously agree in the main with the committee's pet theories for taking the profits out of war.

At the outset, Baruch sternly demanded that he be cleared of "inimical" or else "proved guilty" of violating his trust as chairman of the War Industries Board under Woodrow Wilson.

He insisted that a false impression had been created by earlier testimony before the committee that some of his war-time tax reports were missing from the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Baruch gave his version of the missing papers and then the conference settled down into an amicable session.

At one point he told of his own financial affairs, saying that he sold all holdings from which a profit would arise due directly to the war before entering government service. His income, he added, was reduced drastically.

The committee, or most of its members, had expressed opposition to Baruch's ideas for putting a "ceiling" on prices at the outbreak of war. They looked for him to disagree with their program for taking virtually all war-time profits through drastic taxation.

Baruch said that his reaction was "generally favorable" and that the plan, drawn by John T. Flynn, New York economist, contained "views similar to those I have hitherto supported."

He urged the committee to go forward with its plan to eliminate war profits and offered his help in carrying out the program.

"The American people should demand it," Baruch declared. "This is the time to get it. The American public is aroused. I'll pull with you if you want me. If you don't want me, that's another matter."

The financial deal only briefly with his own plan to fix the "ceiling" for prices in the event of war.

"It could be fixed as of the day war was declared," Baruch told Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, "or of some prior date. It would not freeze prices—they could go down, but could not go up."

Baruch testified that some of his income tax reports had been destroyed by the bureau for space reasons. He presented the committee data on his taxes from returns which he said were kept by the bureau and would have been available to the committee on request.

It required nearly six years to bring chinchillas from Chile to the United States. Their native home is high in the Andes mountains, and they could be moved down safely only a few thousand feet annually.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Relaxation Is Important For Attractive Hands

The loveliest hands in the world belong to women who have learned to relax. They never sit with clenched fists or nervously drum fingertips on the arms of chairs while talking. They use their hands in conversation, of course, but their gestures really mean something and are done gracefully.

If you want your own hands to be of the variety that poets rave about, begin today to do easy exercises that relax your muscles, keep the wrists slender and the fingers flexible. All of them can be done while you are sitting down.

Let arms hang loosely at your sides and then, bending elbows comfortably, make believe that you are pulling taffy. Bring fingers and hands together in front of you, slowly force arms outward to the sides, expanding fingers as you do so. Imagine that the candy is getting quite stiff and that a good deal of effort is required to pull it outward.

Make believe that you are snapping water from fingertips. Hold the arms loosely, bring hands up and then fling them downward, letting your relaxed fingers snap against each other. Repeat until wrists begin to tire.

Opening and closing hands rapidly will remove stiffness from the fingers and, providing you do not get tense, all the good old reliable arm exercises that you did in physical training classes when you were twelve are good, too.

Don't forget that massaging is excellent for the hands and wrists. Smooth on a little cream and then massage upward, from fingertips to wrists, just as you do when you pull on new gloves.

NEXT: Spring perfumes.

Processing Tax on Cotton to Remain

Wallace Blames Textile Mill Troubles on "Overstocking"

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An increase in the cotton processing tax Wednesday was termed by Secretary Wallace "much more probable" than the reduction urged by some sections of the textile industry.

Asked about the NRA cotton textile order permitting production cuts in that industry, Wallace attributed the order to the overstocked position of cotton mills. Then he added:

"The cotton textile business is highly competitive and it periodically becomes overstocked. At this time they think it is popular to come out with this outcry (against the processing tax)."

In view of the present price of cotton, Wallace added, it is "much more probable" that we would have an increase in the processing tax rather than a reduction.

Asked about the effect of imports of Japanese cloth, Wallace replied they are not as great at present as they were 10 or 11 years ago.

The AAA later issued a statement on the increase in cotton prices in which it declared that manufacturers' margins between the price of cotton and selling prices were higher at the peak point in August than any other time since 1925.

"Current mill margins are well above those prevailing between June 1931 and May 1933, and are about in line with those prevailing in the early spring months of 1930 and of 1931," the administration declared.

It added that the cotton processing tax is not borne by cotton mills but is passed on to the consumer in the price of cotton goods.

loan granted the old Dawes bank.

"The bill alleged that the RFC acted 'in concert' with Dawes, former vice president of the United States, 10 of his co-directors, and the Central Republic in diverting assets of the institution to the recently organized City National Bank & Trust Co."

Added is the charge that at least part of a $50,000,000 RFC loan was never turned over to the Central Republic but was given to the new institution. The $50,000,000 loan was authorized in October, 1932, after a previous loan of $30,000,000 in June.

"My mother was such a believer in Cardui that she gave it to me," writes Mrs. Sam Ferrara, of Hammond, La. "I was suffering with my back and side. I would get so dizzy I could hardly stand and then have a weak feeling in my back. This made me very nervous and I did not rest well at night. I felt better after my first bottle of Cardui. Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

Sea Scallops Win Oceans of Approval.

BY MARY E. DAGUE NEA Service Staff Writer

I have planned today's Luncheon dinner around one of my favorite sea-food dishes—scallops. Incidentally, while the family will cheer for this meal, it might be a good day to ask in a few friends. With the scallops, done with spaghetti after a method which I shall hereinafter explain, serve turnip cups filled with buttered new peas, salad of cress with apple and orange slices, and pineapple sherbet.

Scallops Ventimille

One pint scallops, 1/2 pound spaghetti, 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms, 1/2 cup ham cut in matchlike pieces, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, minced parsley.

Look over scallops and parboil in their own liquor in shallow sauce pan for three minutes. Drain and saute in butter for five minutes. Arrange on a bed of spaghetti prepared as follows:

Put the ends of spaghetti into a kettle of boiling salted water. As ends soften submerge sticks until entire length is under water. Boil rapidly for fifteen minutes. Allow 2 teaspoons salt for each quart of water. Drain. Saute mushrooms and ham in butter for ten minutes. Add to cooked spaghetti with 1/2 cup bouillon. (Dissolve 1 bouillon cube in 1/2 cup boiling water.) Mix spaghetti mixture well and place in a shallow baking dish. Add scallops and pour over them the browned butter in which they were cooked, sprinkle with lemon juice, salt and pepper and minced parsley. Put in a hot oven for ten minutes to make very hot and serve at once.

Cress and Apple Salad

One large Bermuda onion, 1 large tart apple, 1 large seedless orange. French dressing, mayonnaise, cress. Peel onion and cut in thin slices. Cover with boiling water and let stand just sixty seconds. Drain and drop into ice water. Let stand fifteen minutes and pat dry between paper towels. Marinate for 1 hour in lemon juice and oil. Pare and core apple and cut in half inch slices, making rings. Peel orange and cut in half slices. Put a norange slice on a bed of cress. Add a slice of onion and top with apple slice. Pour on French dressing and fill cavity of apple slice with mayonnaise.

Pineapple Sherbet

One cup shredded pineapple, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water, 4 tablespoons.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Stewed prunes, cereal, cream, baked French toast, honey, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Black bean soup, lettuce sandwiches, apple crisp, milk, tea.

Dinner: Scallops ventimille, turnip cups filled with peas, cress and apple cake, pineapple sherbet, sponge cake, milk, coffee.

Princeton Gridiron Star Held as Thief

Senior Student Said to Have Confessed to Stealing Watches

PRINCETON, N. J.—Frank Bickerton, 22, of Pottstown, Pa., Princeton senior and for two years Princeton football star, was arrested Wednesday on charges of stealing watches of three college mates and held in $3000 bail, which was furnished for him. He pleaded not guilty. It was announced afterward that John had confessed not only the watch thefts, but also to stealing sums of money totaling $100.

Arrested with him was his friend, Winthrop Partello, 21, of New York city, who, state police say, confessed to acting with John in a series of raids on Princeton dormitory rooms in which eight watches were stolen. Partello also pleaded not guilty and was released in $1,000 bail. Police say that all the eight watches he is accused of having taken, including a $500 one which belonged to Ralph Fletcher, a student, have been traced.

Tugwell to Direct Fight on Erosion

One Billion Dollars Available for Federal Land Program

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A new organization holding future possibilities of replacing the AAA's present method of crop control was established Wednesday at the Department of Agriculture under Rexford G. Tugwell.

The move was a consolidation of federal agencies dealing with soil erosion. Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture, is expected to direct through the use of about one billion dollars in public works funds—the administration's land use program.

Present plans involve retirement of millions of acres of marginal lands which contribute to surpluses. Some experts contend this may prove a more effective means of preventing overproduction than the AAA's policy of taxing commodities to raise funds for acreage slashes.

The rise in the cost of living and increasing competition from foreign textiles have increased opposition to the AAA program and the land retirement eventually may provide a substitute.

Officials said, however, there was no thought of any immediate change in crop control plans and that Tugwell's program was too far in the future to effect current adjustment projects.

Secretary Wallace ordered consolidation of the agencies dealing with erosion, a pressing problem just now because of dust storms in the West.

How Does Your Garden?

Six specialists of the New Jersey College of Agriculture and Experiment Station at Rutgers University have pooled their experience to tell you how to grow your garden successfully. They have prepared 12 illustrated articles.

 Associate Professor of Entomology, N. J. College of Agriculture, Associate Entomologist, N. J. Agricultural Experiment Station Rutgers University

Three-fourths of the species of animal life consist of insects. A single plant, under some conditions, may carry as many as 50,000 to 100,000 insects upon it, so abundant are the number of individuals of any one kind.

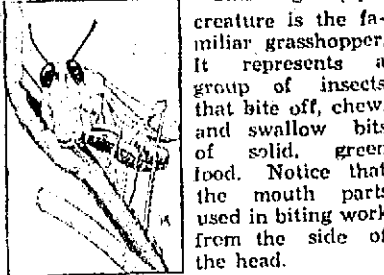

A complete generation of some forms of insects may develop within six to 10 days, and they grow and reproduce so rapidly that tremendous numbers may appear almost overnight.

The control of these dangerous little creatures, therefore, cannot be overlocked by the efficient gardener.

epicurious parasites and predators are usually the most beneficial.

The white spots in above photo are Mexican mealy bugs, the black spots the ladybird beetle, a predator. Mealy bugs are also sucking insects, but their bodies and egg masses are covered with a white, powdery or woolly, wax-like material that makes them very difficult to wet and kill with contact sprays.

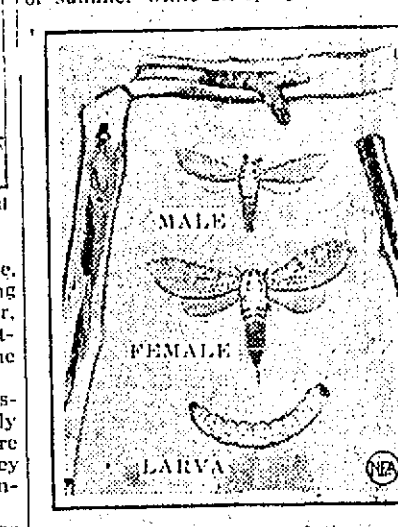

Such insects may be controlled by spraying or dusting, with some poisonous material, such as arsenate of lead, the plants which they molest.

Flowering plants badly infested with these pests should be destroyed entirely or should have the injured parts cut out and destroyed. Plants worth saving may be freed by thorough and repeated spraying with contact sprays, such as nicotine and soap or summer white oil sprays.

Flowering plants badly infested with these pests should be destroyed entirely or should have the injured parts cut out and destroyed. Plants worth saving may be freed by thorough and repeated spraying with contact sprays, such as nicotine and soap or summer white oil sprays.

The praying mantis, is one of the most spectacular of these predators. The more inconspicuous the better.

The larva, or young, of the wood leopard moth bores its way inside the stems of many wood plants, as shown above. Such insects must be controlled by injection into the burrow made by the larva of some material poisonous to the insect. Nicotine solutions or carbon bisulphide liquid are frequently used. They may also be killed by prodding with a flexible wire, or by cutting them out.

Convicted of Plot Against His Wife

Alabama Postal Employee Gets 5 Years for Attempted Shooting

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—A Criminal Court jury Wednesday convicted Frank Slayton, former postal employee, of hiring a negro to shoot his wife as she slept in her suburban home and imposed a sentence of five years in prison. Slayton was charged with assault with intent to kill.

The jury took the case shortly after 2 p. m. after Slayton had taken the stand to deny any connection with the shooting of his wife.

The state charged that Slayton hired Percy Bragg, negro, to shoot Mrs. Slayton. Bragg Tuesday accused the defendant of hiring him to shoot Mrs. Slayton for $48 and the promise of a job.

Mrs. Slayton also testified in her husband's defense, denying the charges and saying that the home life of her husband and herself had been happy.

Although denying connection with the shooting of his wife, Slayton said that he had had intimate relations with Miss Willie Lou Teachworth, called as a state witness in an effort to show a motive for the charge against Slayton.

Miss Teachworth, who returned here from El Dorado, Ark., previously had testified that she was the "other woman" in the case and that Slayton often had spent the night with her in an apartment, the rent of which was paid by Slayton. Letters written by Slayton to Miss Teachworth and couched in endearing terms was introduced.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
 If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

bering warrants which will make possible the checking of all warrants to determine whether they were paid in proper sequence and handled properly.

He said the attorney general ruled recently that collectors and treasurers were to receive their commissions in kind. The judges complained that the officials had developed a practice of collecting warrants due immediately rather than waiting their turn with new warrants.

Recommendations for handling security funds under Act 21, of 1933, setting up County Depository Boards and governing selection of depositories were offered by Mr. Sims.

Earlier in the day the judges agreed the counties had been left "holding the sack" under the new state liquor law. They said they would bear the cost of court enforcement and would collect only limited fees.

Discussion indicated that virtually all the judges considered the per capita road tax a failure in its present form and were anxious to secure a more effective means of enforcing collections. They complained that under the present set-up persons who fail to pay their road tax cannot be made to work on the county roads until after December 1, when the per capita tax becomes delinquent. At that time there is no road work to successfully employ the delinquents and the judges went on record as favoring a change in the delinquent date to March 1, so that delinquents can be made to work out the tax.

Judge Ruthven said the county judges' highway turnback revenue over $16,000,000 to the Highway Department and 75 per cent to the counties was not a raid on the refunding program and had been misunderstood. The bill was passed by Governor Futrell.

Another bill sponsored by the judges providing that the counties retain title to lands forfeited for taxes, was described as a constructive measure that would have gone further toward solving the problem of county financing than any other measure considered by the legislature. The bill was defeated in the House.

Judge Ruthven said the Highway Commission had agreed to deed back to the counties all right-of-way along abandoned state routes. He said the plan would allow the judges to trade the old for the new right-of-way or maintain the old state road as a county road.
